RECIPE SHARING

Presented by Stakhov Ivan

Project Description

Many home cooks keep recipes in scattered notes, chat messages, and bookmarks, which makes them hard to organize, search, and share. This project solves that problem by providing a centralized platform where users can create structured recipes, discover new dishes, interact with other cooks, and export recipes for offline use.

Features and Functionality

Recipe Management

- Create, edit, delete, publish, and unpublish recipes
- Upload recipe media (image/video)
- Download single-recipe PDF from the details page
- Owner and admin authorization for protected actions

Discovery and Search

- Search recipes by text query
- Filter by category and tag
- Sort by newest or popular
- Paginated recipe feed

Community and Engagement

- Comment on recipes
- Like recipes
- Save recipes to favorites
- Permission checks for comment deletion (owner/admin)

Architecture Overview & Tech Stack

- Frontend: Server-rendered HTML templates with responsive CSS and Vanilla JavaScript for interactive behavior via Fetch API.
- Backend: Flask application organized into feature modules (`auth`, `recipes`, `main`, `api`) with form handling, validation, and business logic.
- API Layer. Internal Flask API routes for app functionality and integration with an external HTTP file storage API for media upload/delete.
- Database: SQLite database accessed through SQLAlchemy ORM for users, recipes, comments, tags/categories, likes, and favorites.

- Frontend: HTML, CSS, Vanilla JavaScript (Fetch API)
- Backend: Python, Flask, Flask-Login, Flask-WTF (CSRF), SQLAlchemy
- Database: SQLite
- External Integration: HTTP-based file storage API for recipe media
- Dev Environment: Python virtual environment
